Prominent Residents Long Grove Ia. Celebrate Golden Anniversary Feb. 2

R. K. BROWNLIE

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Brownlie, prominent and well known residents of the Long Grove community, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary, Tuesday, Feb. 2. A family dinner, at which a few intimate and long-time friends of the honored couple will be guests, will be only formal observance of the occasion. Messages of congratulations are being received by the couple.

Their wedding Feb. 2, 1882 took place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Mau. Both families were pioneer settlers in Scott county, being established here in 1837. Mr. and Mrs. Brownlie are natives of the county and have spent their lives here. Until they operated the home farm,

Mr. Brownlie is president and general manager of the Long Grove Mutual Telephone company, a position he has held since organization of the line 25 years ago. He is also president of the Stockmen's Savings bank and was chairman of the Scott county exemption board during the World war. Despite his advanced years he is still actively interested in affairs of the community and both he and his wife are in excellent health. They are parents of two sons: Dr. I. C. Katherine Brownlie

SANTA FE, N.M. — Katherine I. Brownlie, 77, died Tuesday, July 8, 2003, in Santa Fe, after a brief illness.

Ms. Brownlie was the daughter of Harry Oran Brownlie and Ruth Ebert Brownlie. Katherine's ancestors immigrated from Scotland through Nova Scotia, Canada, to Iowa and founded the village of Long Grove in 1838. Her great-grandfather, James Brownlie, was a farmer and founding minister of Long Grove Christian Church. Katherine's grandfather, Robert Kossuth Brownlie, was a farmer, cattle breeder and the banker in Long Grove. Harry Oran Brownlie, Katherine's father, also headed the bank.

After "the banker's holiday" in 1933, the family moved toavenport, where Katherine spent her childhood. She majored in history and political science at Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa. After graduation, she moved to California and worked as a personnel director for several companies until her retirement in the late 1980s.

After retirement, she settled in Santa Fe in 1990, mainly to attend the Santa Fe Opera. She was a member of Unitarian Universalist Congregation, Santa Fe Opera Guild, Seniors Reaching Out, American Association of University Women, Renesan, as well as numerous political, human services and cultural organizations.

She is survived by her loving nephew, Steve West Sr., of Hiawatha, Iowa, and his family, plus her cousins, nieces and nephews. Many of her childhood friends remained in the Quad-City area but continued their friendship across time and miles. Katherine will be remembered by her numerous friends and family for her generous heart and quick mind.

A local memorial service is pending and will be announced. Donations in her honor may be sent to Santa Fe Opera or Unitarian Universalist Congregation of Santa Fe Endowment Fund.

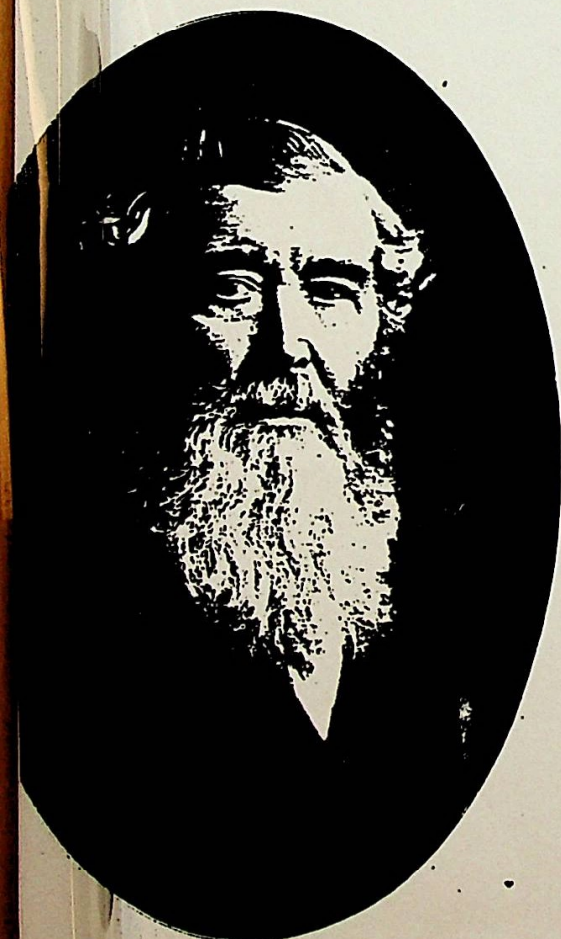

HISTORY OF SCOTT COUNTY

ALEXANDER W. BROWNLIE.

Alexander W. Brownlie needs no introduction to the readers of this volume, for he has made his home within the borders of Scott county for more than three score years and ten, having been brought here by his parents when in the second year of his age. He was successfully engaged in farming and stock-raising throughout his active business career but is living largely retired at the present time, enjoying the fruits of his former toil in well earned ease. His birth occurred in Canada on the 22d of May, 1837, his parents being James and Ritchie (Walker) Brownlie, both of whom were natives of Scotland. The father was born on the 26th of November, 1807, and the mother's birth occurred in the year 1810. They were married in Canada and remained residents of that country until 1838, when the family home was established in Scott county, Iowa, the father coming here a few months prior to the arrival of his wife and three children. James Brownlie took up a timber claim at Long Grove, which place at that time boasted only one shanty. He constructed a sod house or dugout and after residing therein for a year built what was considered a commodious log house in those days. In 1851 the primitive structure was replaced by another residence, which is still standing. James Brownlie accumulated about four hundred acres of land and devoted his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits throughout his entire business career, bringing his fields under a high state of cultivation and improvement. He held various positions of public trust and responsibility and was one of the six men (all Brownlie by name) who organized the Christian church at Long Grove, in 1839. Preaching services were conducted in his home from 1839 until 1846, when a log church was erected, and he served as an elder until his demise. This church is the oldest in Scott county. Mr. Brownlie was called to his final rest in 1893 and the community thus lost one of its worthy pioneer settlers whose labors had proved an important element in the work of early development and upbuilding. His wife passed away in 1889. Their children were six in number, as follows: Jane, who is deceased, as is also her husband, James Neil; Mrs. Isabelle McCosh, who has likewise passed away; Alexander W., of this review; Catherine, the deceased wife of John Fluke, of Grinnell, Iowa; Andrew, who has also been called to his final rest; and Robert, who is a resident of Long Grove.

Alexander W. Brownlie began his education under the preceptorship of his parents, as there were still no schools in the pioneer community. When he was about ten years of age a little "temple of learning" was established at Long Grove with Phillip Van Patten as instructor, and there he pursued his studies for a time. He remained under the parental roof until he was married and then purchased and located upon a tract of one hundred and sixty acres near Long Grove. Part of the land was broken and after the remainder had been made ready for farming purposes he erected a dwelling and there carried on his agricultural interests for about twelve years. On the expiration of that period he still engaged in the live stock business to some extent but is living largely retook up his abode on another farm of one hundred and thirty acres a little nearer Long Grove and, disposing of his original property soon afterward, was actively engaged in its operation for a great many years. In 1876 he became interested in the live stock business in association with his brother Robert and they carried on their operations in this connection for about a third of a century, making a specialty of shorthorn cattle, Poland China hogs and Percheron horses. He is still engaged in the live-stock business to some extent but is living largely retired at the present time, making his home at No. 501 Kirkwood avenue in Davenport. He is one of the stockholders in the Stockmen's Bank at Long Grove, which he assisted in organizing in May, 1907.

On the 22d of January, 1862, Mr. Brownlie was united in marriage to Miss

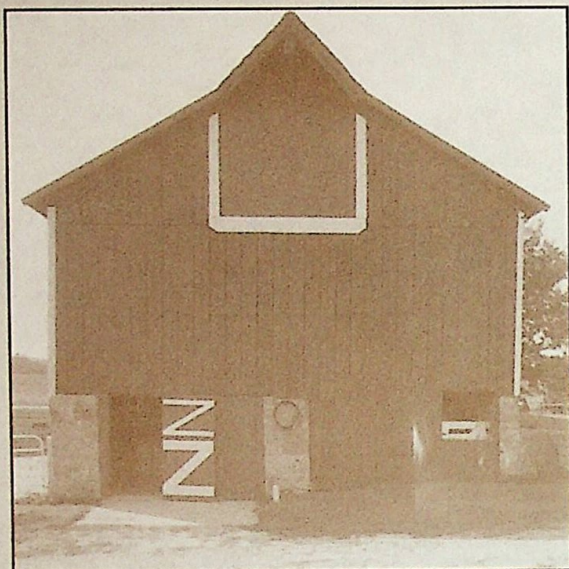

A. W. BROWNLIE

Elizabeth Thompson, who was born in England on the 22d of January, 1841, and who in 1844 was brought to Scott county by her parents, the Hon. Hugh M. and Jane Thompson. Her father represented this district in the state legislature for a great many years and was also the president and manager of the Iowa Agricultural College. Mr. and Mrs. Brownlie became the parents of four children. Sarah, the eldest, wedded M. H. Calderwood, of Davenport, and is now the mother of seven children, namely: Ethel; Blanche; Errett and Almeta, twins; Helen; Dwight; and Ruth. William, the cashier of the Citizens First Bank of Davenport, wedded Miss Mary E. Fleming, by whom he has one child, Aline. Annie, who gave her hand in marriage to John Neil, of Cherokee, Iowa, now has four children: Iola, Jennie, Laverne and Bernice. Andrew Brownlie is deceased. Mrs. Elizabeth Brownlie, the wife and mother, was called to her final rest in the year 1874.

Mr. Brownlie is a lifelong member of the Christian church at Long Grove and has always held official position therein, having continuously served as trustee since its incorporation and as elder and Sunday school superintendent for about thirty years. He has spent practically his entire life in this county and is therefore familiar with its development from pioneer times down to the present, having aided in the arduous toil which brought about the wonderful transformation that is everywhere apparent in this part of the state.

THE BARN

The Barn, 1999

The barn, that is still present on this property, is located just west of the sod house. The exact construction date of the first section of the barn is hard to determine. It is known that the barn was built in two stages, the east half in approximately 1840 and the west half in 1900. Rough hand-hewn beams are easily visible in the interior of the barn; some of these logs are still covered with bark.

HISTORY

In 1826, the Brownlie's, a family of common people, left their homeland of Scotland and traveled to Canada. In Scotland, they had worked as hired hands, doing farm work for the Lords of Scotland. It was the promise of land in Canada and the excitement of their passage over that brought them to North America.

After living in Canada for 12 years, the Brownlie family became dissatisfied with British rule in the Province of Ontario. So, in June of 1838, they sold everything they owned and left Canada. Their journey eventually brought them to Davenport, Iowa. Finding that all the timber land along the Mississippi River had been claimed, they headed north, where they were able to purchase 100 acres of timber from a Mr. Coate's for $160.00. This land is now part of the town of Long Grove, Iowa.

Due to the abundance of timber, most homes in the area were built of log. But Alexander Brownlie used his skill as a stone mason to construct his house out of sod. He used a plow to cut the sod into strips, and used this to create a two-story farmhouse for his family.

In 1932, the second owner, John Martens, sold the house to Edward and Dora Lage, parents of current owner Bob Lage. When Bob and Marlene Lage had the opportunity to move into the home where Bob grew up, he wanted no part of it. The house was big and cold, and without indoor plumbing. Those trips to the outhouse were part of his past, not his future. So the Lage's built a new house on the property, and in 1967, began demolition of the "old house." James "Bud" Nagle (their brother-in-law), removed a large board from a doorframe of the "old house", and what he uncovered put a halt to the demolition process. Not even the "old-timers" in the area had any idea that the house was built of sod; it was expected to be built of log.

Marlene Lage and Howard Brownlie, a descendant of Alexander Brownlie, worked tirelessly on restoring the house and having it placed on the National Register of Historic Places. With help from an architect, a local contractor, volunteers, and numerous "Long Grove boys", a large portion of the restoration has been completed. Presently, the Brownlie Sod House Questers #1229 assist with projects that help continue the restoration of the house.

ARCHITECTURE

Alexander Brownlie plowed tough prairie sod into two-foot by one-foot strips to create large bricks made of sod. These bricks formed the walls of the house. Bits of grass and weeds can still be seen in the rock-hard soil. Lath was attached to the earthen walls with old square nails imprinted with the letter "B". Plaster mixed with horsehair was added to the lath. On the exterior, the sod was covered with clapboard to preserve the sod, and improve the appearance of the house. The basement under the original sod portion of the house was built with hand-hewn wood beams and walls of native limestone. A brick addition and a wood frame addition (that included a third story attic) were built in later years. The brick addition is still in tact, but the wood frame addition has been removed. This sod home is especially unusual due to its two-story construction, which was necessary to accommodate the size of the Brownlie family. There is no other known two-story sod house of this type in the United States.

We are thankful for the opportunity to

Grant that our coming together will result in building a finer organization by strengthening our awareness of the heritage we love and appreciate.

May our endeavors today lead us, so that we may not leave our mark in preservation of material things, but more importantly, that we may grow in fellowship and love.

you through. Trust Him. Keep standing, keep believing and keep hoping."

Some thoughts regarding reproductions

It is important to remember that reproductions have been produced for years. At the turn of the century, companies were reproducing Colonial furniture. Glassware has been reproduced all through this century. An item can be old and still be a reproduction. Early reproductions are now collectible. The danger lies in buying a 1930s piece of furniture and paying an 1830s price.

Always use common sense. Don't buy something without examining it carefully. If the item is supposed to be old, remember that it should look old. You will hear many stories about why a piece looks so good. You will be told that it was wrapped up the day it was purchased and stored 100 years, or that it was found in a warehouse. Even if these stories were true, the piece should show some signs of age.

Remember, reproduction artists are often careless when it comes to detail. By asking yourself a few questions you may be able to spot many questionable aging techniques. Ask why the wear and tear is there in the first place. Do the dents, scratches and bumps appear to be from daily use and cleaning? Be wary if the aging is too uniform.

People who fake and reproduce items try to keep their costs low. They don't always take the time to properly age parts of an object that won't be seen. Take drawers out of furniture and examine them to make sure they match the rest of the piece. If a cast-iron toy or bank comes apart, dismantle it and look inside. If an item is framed, unframe it. Important information such as dates and the addresses of printing companies are often hidden under frames and matts. A word of caution — only take these measures if you are seriously interested in buying the piece, and have the owner's permission. Be sure you can put the item back together without damaging it.

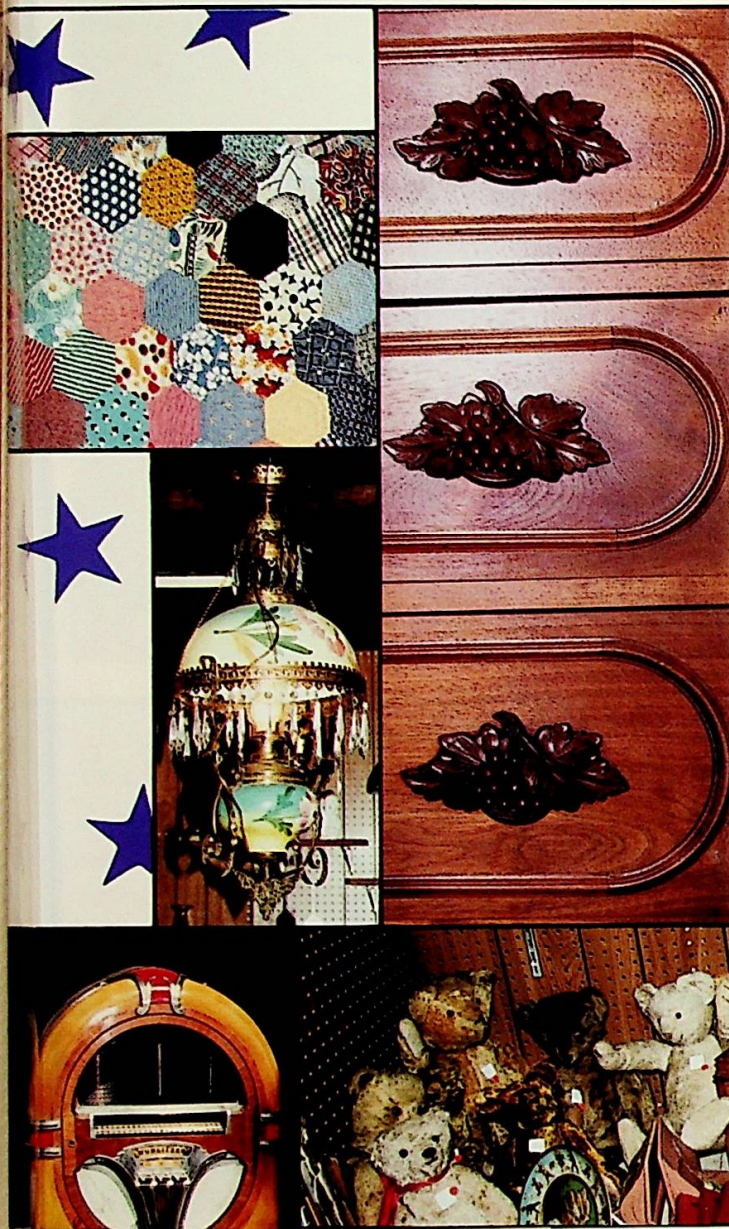

Before spending a lot of money on a new collection, research the subject. Find other collectors and ask them what reproduction and fantasy items are on the market. Most collectors are eager to share information.

Companies that sell reproductions usually have catalogs which they mail to prospective customers. Some of the catalogs are free, but most cost a nominal fee, generally under $10. Get as many catalogs as you can. Look at the ads in Country and Victoriana magazines, and check antique trade papers that allow reproduction advertising. Most trade papers will send you one free sample copy from which you can get such information, or check your local library to see

Childhood Memories

Iowa Questers State Day

April 3, 1993

So much of our questing comes wrapped in memories: the family Havilland pattern, Grandma's turkey red tablecloth off the thresher's table, our dolls—cloth, china and paper, toys for girls, toys for boys, fishing lures from generations of avid fishing expeditions.

This year Quester Chapters Old Capitol, Red Cedar, Robert Lucas, Rose Hill, Octagon Barn, Plum Grove, and Junction Collectors invite you to share memories of that special time each of our lives—Childhood.

We wish to remind you as you plan your trip to bring an item for the Treats and Treasures table. And as always, Historian's Scrapbooks and Chapter Yearbooks will be displayed.

The Highlander Motel on the northeast corner of I-80 at Intersection #246 and Highway 1, on the north edge of Iowa City, will be Convention Headquarters.

Room costs are: single room $57.75 plus tax, double room $62.75 plus tax. Please make your reservations directly with The Highlander Tel. 1-800-728-2000.

April 2 through 4, the huge up-scale Cedar Rapids Antique Show will be held at the 5 Seasons Center. Plus the Westdale-Glandorph Mall Antique Show will be on in Cedar Rapids, and a Flea Market extravaganza is being held on the south side of Cedar Rapids at Hawkeye Downs. Makes your mouth water, doesn't it? You may wish to plan for at least a two day convention trip this year!

Because of all the interesting antiquing in our area this weekend our tour possibilities are three. The Plum Grove article within this issue gives you the information of docent site tours of the Governor Lucas home in east Iowa City.

Old Capitol on the Pentacrest of the University of Iowa is another tour that is extremely popular in the spring. If this is your first opportunity to see it, don't miss it.

The newly reopened Herbert Hoover Presidential Library and Museum in nearby West Branch is also open daily from 9-5 with docents available to take you through the permanent Hoover Exhibit and the new special exhibit, The Roaring Twenties. This exhibit includes Babe Ruth's bat, Louie Armstrong's horn, a 1920's main street with 1924 roadster, antique clothing of the era, and even a flagpole sitter. Questers will also be able to see the clothes of Lou Henry Hoover. The manikins and glass display cases were purchased by the Questers of Iowa a few years ago.

Remember the special awe and excitement when the first circus posters began to appear on the sides of buildings, barns, and shop windows?

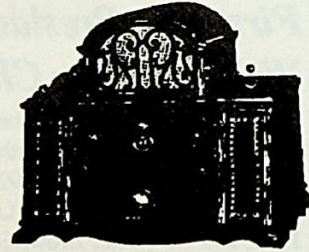

All the colors of animals and beautiful people were meant to draw us down to the fair grounds on a summer afternoon or evening. Return with us to this magical of times in childhood with Prof. Burford, a fellow memory traveler.

Burford to this day plays drums in the Culpepper Merriweather Circus, an European-style one ring circus that crisscrosses the Midwest introducing more generations to the agility, the derring-do, and hilarity of a circus performance.

A side trip to the Art Institute in Chicago with his father in 1933 during the Chicago World's Fair of that year, convinced a thirteen year old Byron that art was going along with his passion, Circus . . . and his love.

His prestigious academic career as a Professor at the University of Iowa coupled with the sawdust and a drum roll in his heart will make his illustrations to long remember.

ELVIS!

1,640 stamps sold by 2 o'clock Friday

Elvis Presley fans have put their stamp of approval on a new issue from the United States Post Office.

Admirers of the late great singer lined up at post offices across the country to purchase their idol's likeness on a new commemorative stamp which went on sale at noon last Friday.

"King" fans-turned-philatelists kept clerk Marlene Lage hopping at the Eldridge Post Office, she said. By 2 p.m. Friday, she had already sold 1,640 of the stamps—nearly half the amount initially issued to the local post office.

"This is the biggest sale that I remember," said Lage, who has been with the post office for 19 years. Many of the stamps were purchased in sheets, or panes—some as treasured memorabilia, others as a simple investment.

Lage attributes brisk sales of the stamp to the "recognition factor." Unlike many relatively obscure figures honored by the issue of commemorative stamps, "everybody knows Elvis," she said.

And it seems everyone wants the tiny portrait of the handsome young singer, as he looked early in his career.

Folks who waited to get their Elvis stamps may be out of luck. As of Monday, only a few hundred stamps remained at the local P.O. And officials were uncertain whether there would be another shipment of what could become the most sought-after commemorative ever issued in the U.S.

By John Willard
QUAD-CITY TIMES

Four years of work and planning are beginning to pay off for Patti and Carl Grall.

This weekend, they are showing off the bed and breakfast inn they created in a home formerly owned by the grandfather of Davenport-born jazz legend Bix Beiderbecke.

Once abandoned and ravaged by vandals, the 19-room Gothic Revival mansion at 532 W. 7th St., Davenport, now looks much the way it did when a young Bix scampered over its hardwood floors.

The Gralls rebuilt long-gone architectural features like the corner tower and porte cochere. They brought back chimneys and added a new roof, complete with the tri-color diamond pattern of the original slate.

They put back balconies and opened up a second floor porch that commands a panoramic view of the Mississippi River.

Most important, they were able to convince bankers that their dreams had merit.

Through it all they stuck to their plan. "It's too easy to throw up your hands and say 'I quit,'" Carl said.

The result is the Beiderbecke Inn. It has five guest rooms, three with working fireplaces and all with private baths. Guests share the foyer, library, parlor and dining room.

Rates range from $65 for former maid's quarters to $115 for the master suite with an original marble fireplace and white bath. The Bix Beiderbecke Room, which rents for $115, has a balcony and a porch with an unobstructed view of the Centennial Bridge.

All rooms are furnished with authentic Victorian antiques the Gralls hunted at salvage houses and auctions. In the foyer, for example, is a grand piano they bought for $300 from a woman who wanted it in the home of a family with young children.

It adds the perfect touch to the room, where musical ensembles often entertained at the Beiderbeckes' parties.

Charles Beiderbecke, a wholesale grocer, and his wife, Louise, completed the mansion in 1880. It remained in the Beiderbecke family until the 1930s when it was converted into apartments.

At the suggestion of a friend, the Gralls bought the place for $12,000 at a tax sale in 1989. They intended to restore it as a family home but later decided a bed and breakfast inn would be a good use. The couple and their three children will live in the attic rooms.

Like the original owner, Carl also is in the grocery business. He manages frozen foods at the Hy-Vee store on Kimberly Road in Davenport. His wife is a nurse.

They insisted on an authentic restoration. They hired Rock Island architect Tevis Freeman to recreate the home's octagonal turret on the southeast corner. He scaled his drawings by counting the clapboards in an old photo.

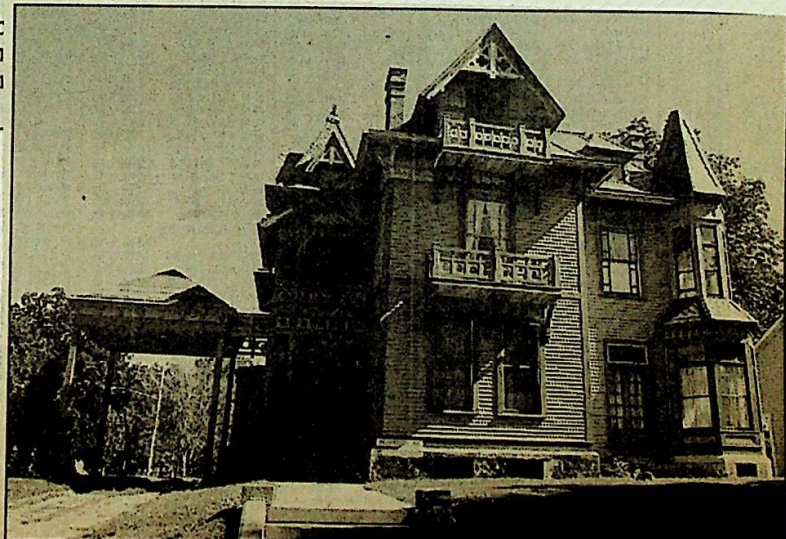

Equally tedious was getting financing.

The Gralls got a $25,000 grant through the Iowa Historic Resource and Development Program. They also got a loan from the Rock Island Bank for the roof, chimneys and tower construction. Firststar Bank of Davenport provided the business loan.

"Bankers will talk to you, but you have to show that you are sincere and what your game plan is," Grall said.

He says he has invested more than $200,000 in the project so far. More work remains, including finishing exterior painting and adding more architectural details.

"It never ends," Carl said.

Larry Fisher/QUAD-CITY TIMES

The Beiderbecke Inn, 532 W. 7th St., Davenport, has been returned to its Gothic Revival glory by Patti and Carl Grall. The mansion was completed in 1880 for Charles Beiderbecke, grandfather of the legendary Davenport-born jazz cornetist Bix Beiderbecke.

DESIGNER'S NOTEBOOK

By Teri Seidman

More than any time of the year, wicker is truly the springtime choice for the light, airy look.

Watching the sunset making shadows through your patterned wicker rocker, iced glass in hand, says 'great country living.'

At home, indoors or out, wicker, formerly "wyker," with its friendly, open textures, softens a room of antique or contemporary furniture. Literally, wicker means woven furniture from willow reed, rush, straw, bamboo, raffia, and other dried grasses. Found in Egyptian tombs, even King Tut's, in and out of fashion, reaching enormous popularity in Victorian times, wicker has resurfaced as today's favorite classic.

Prized for their intricate, sensuous handcrafted designs, solid frames, and excellent construction, antique wicker furnishings made before 1900 are works of art and command high prices. After the turn of the century and through the '30s, wicker furniture was often made in sets. Beautiful single pieces are also grand. Seek them in antiques shops, country auction sales and specialty shops.

Established in 1902, Bielecky Bros. remains as standard-bearer in the manufacture of fine-quality wicker for contemporary styles and reproductions of old classics. They also custom finish what may well become tomorrow's heirlooms. To get the look if not the longevity, look for nifty new wicker which literally abounds in great quantities in department stores, emporiums, discount stores and second-hand furniture shops.

Of course, once you are into wicker, you'll discover hundreds of interesting and fascinating accessories such as standing flower boxes, cheval and hanging mirrors, magazines, bath stands, etc. Use a wicker screen as an airy room divider or put a huge flowering green fern on a white wicker plant stand. Do lots of comparison shopping as you can find bargains if you really get out and search.

The fresh texture of white wicker brings the sparkle of a whitecap to bedrooms and living rooms. With white cotton, white wood and white walls it is especially pristine and crisp, with white dominating to pull together the disparate elements. Add on old quilt or nautical prints for the final touches.

By contrast, wicker spray-painted patent leather black, which many companies will do for an extra charge, makes a strong statement with pillows of bold floral or geometrics. I designed a white bedroom with black lacquered wood headboard and night tables, using ivory and black flowered sheets. Black wicker chairs, upholstered in black and mattress ticking, looked marvelous on a black and white floral oriental rug resting on white carpeting. The fillip was my client's outstanding oriental art collection.

Of course, things are not always black and white. Paint your wicker any shade selected from your upholstery or rug. Punch up a guest bedroom with a single hot pink wicker chair.

Wicker in toasty natural colors coupled with white duck, terra cotta, sisal matting, granite tables, and greenery create that earthtone palette so wonderful indoors or not.

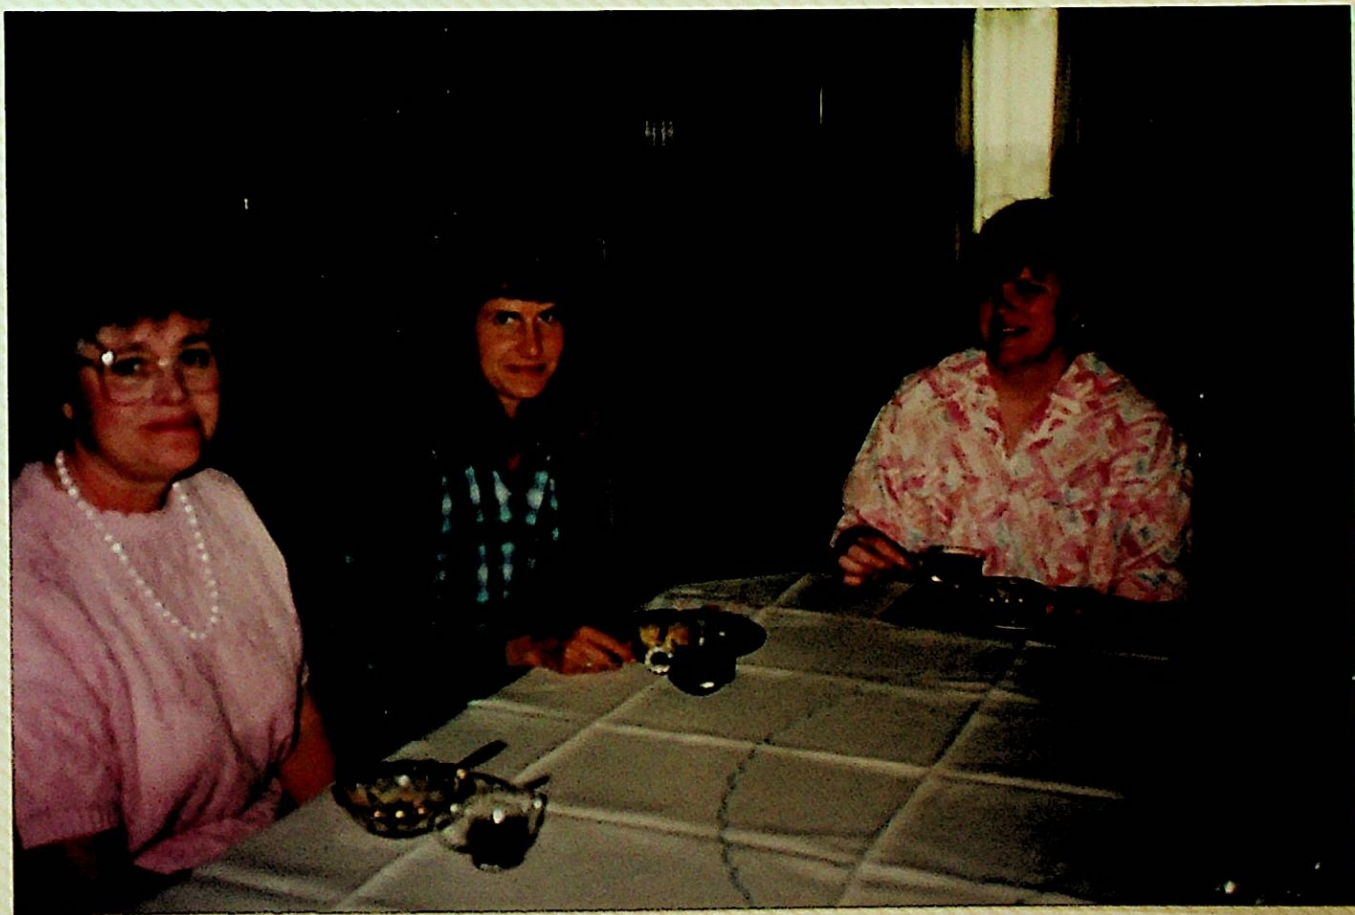

As you educate your eye to the pleasures of collecting and using wicker, you will discover your own favorites. I particularly like antique French wicker. Two books which provide a rich history of the styles and whimsy of wicker through text and abundant illustrations are: All About Wicker by Patricia Corbin, published by E.P. Dutton, and Collecting and Restoring Wicker Furniture by Richard Saunders, from Crown Publishers.

Brownlie Sod House # 1229

Sod houses have long since disappeared from Iowa prairies, but miraculously a type of one in an apparent near-perfect state of preservation has been found in Long Grove in Scott County.

The Alexander Brownlie Sod House was built in 1838 by three Brownlie brothers who came from Scotland, by way of Canada, to Long Grove to settle. Alexander, being a stone mason by trade, probably accounts for the unique method of building with the materials at hand. The sod was formed into adobe-like bricks by mixing the sod with prairie grass and putting it into a handmade wooden form, drying, and then using as a bricklayer would today. It would have been covered by the next year with clapboard siding to protect it from the elements. The inside walls are covered with the original plaster. As the family grew, two additions were added, the first about 1860 and the next one about 1890. It now stands as it was in the 1860's.

The Brownlies were most prominent, James being the first minister of the Long Grove Christian Church, for which the Brownlies donated the land. The first church services were held in the sod house until a church was built.

There have been but three families of ownership of this property; Brownlies until 1906, Martens from 1906-1933, and Lages from 1933 to the present. The Lages had been told the house was built of logs, and as demolition was about to begin, a board was removed from an inside doorway, thereby exposing the sod wall. Plans changed! Demolition ceased, an architect was consulted, research began, decisions were made, and finally new plans began.

The house needs to be functional. Without heat or plumbing, the best solution for use seemed to be to host an annual Prairie Market at the Sod House. This event features the Sod House for its architectural, historical, and educational value, as well as promoting the heritage crafts of many local artisans.

The nearby barn, of the same era, and constructed of hand hewn beams and wooden pegs, is also utilized for demonstrations at this event. For additional information call Marlene Lage at 319/285-9935.

In September, 1992, when Chapter #1229 held its first meeting in this house, it seemed only fitting to select the Brownlie Sod House as the name, as well as our local project.

Questers pitch in to restore area's heritage

by Tory Brecht

The restored ice cream parlor in the Pioneer Village of Walnut Grove sparkles with fine china and delicate glassware.

The tables are set with care, each silver teaspoon aligned perfectly with dainty saucers and teacups.

The scene is a high tea, a rare event in these parts, but one taken very seriously by the ladies of the Walnut Grove Questers organization.

The tea is being held for another Questers' chapter, the Brownlie Sod House Questers, as a thank you. The Brownlie Questers helped organize the Walnut Grove group.

According to Phyllis Green of Eldridge, the purpose of the Questers is the preservation and restoration, as well as study and appreciation of antiques.

All the fine place settings, pitchers and silverware at the tea are from the antique collections of the Questers.

"What constitutes a high tea is the time of the day and the elegance of the setting," Green said. "We will be serving hand-dipped strawberries, hand-dipped dried fruit and delicate breads, as well as tea."

The Walnut Grove chapter, which spends much of its time volunteering at the restored village, consists of 16 members from throughout the county.

The Brownlie Sod House Questers #1229 were thoroughly impressed and appreciative of the High Tea given for them by The Walnut Grove Questers #1221.

There were small tables decorated in the members finest china, silverware, glassware and linens. The fresh spring flowers of peonies, foxglove, daisies and lilies decorated each table.

The food was exquisite, tiny avocado and philly cream sandwiches, cream puffs with tuna salad, nut bread, chocolate dipped apricots and strawberries. Also pound cake, tea and decorated sugar cubes

Victorian tea party held in Donahue

For a short moment in time, members of the Brownlie Sod House Questers, Chapter #1229, were transported back into the elegant Victorian-age of the 1890s.

Dorothy (Mrs. Robert) Curtis opened her Donahue home for her guests on March 13, and she and her co-hostess, Marge Casel of Long Grove, served as the gracious hostesses.

Guests and members were greeted at the door by Shawn Manley, who served as the butler, and after Victorian calling cards were presented, the 14 guests were seated.

Guests, who are not members of the Questers group, included Ardel Kraft of Dixon, and two members of the Victorian Tea Society, Lady Freda Pohlmann, Blue Grass, and Duchess Maurine Fralik of Wilton.

The style show, which followed a short business meeting, featured Victorian clothing from a private collection of Wendy Kraft, Davenport, and Lori Curtis and Katherine Webster, Donahue. The owners modeled the clothing which were presented in vignettes of the Victorian era.

The six-course luncheon, served by the hostesses, included hand-dipped strawberries, petit fours and the use of finger bowls.

The guests received gifts of Victorian poetry and lavender sachets as they departed.

The Questers is an international study group which was formed in 1944 to stimulate the appreciation of antiques. The group also encourages the preservation of historical landmarks.

Celebrating a life w

One of my favorite recollections of Lora Baughman is when she covered the Mississippi Valley Fair in the "early years" at the NSP. When Lora died last week, I looked up the ad which is printed below, 20 years ago to the week, from our issue of Aug. 5, 1976.

It was about that time that our Fair Issue was really getting off the ground. The 4-H enrollment in the county was large, and interest in the exhibits was as great as it is today, maybe greater.

An "Impressions" column in the same issue praised the Fair Board for shortening the fair to six days from ten. Previously, events covered one week plus two weekends. If you think the fair is long now, imagine that!

We had a smaller staff and it took more

We were proud of our fair coverage then, as we are today, although the way we produce the issue has changed considerably. This year, for example, Scott Campbell will
